Focusing on occupational safety, health and environmental research and educational programs to help reduce workplace injuries, Chicago-based CNA Foundation recently donated $2,500 to the ASSE Foundation (ASSEF). The donation was presented this past June during ASSE’s annual conference in Denver.

The CNA Foundation’s donation will help support the ASSEF’s college scholarships, research projects and professional development grants in the field of occupational safety, health and the environment.

Scholarship Recipients Flourish in SH&E Careers

Diana Franck
Liberty Mutual
Loss Prevention

After receiving the ASSE Foundation scholarship, I completed my B.S. in Occupational Safety at Northern Illinois University. After graduation, I accepted a position with DaimlerChrysler as a plant ergonomist. I am now working in Liberty Mutual’s Loss Prevention Dept. and I have the opportunity to address a multitude of exposures in various industries. I chose this profession because SH&E professionals are changing lives for the better, promoting what is right and good, and sending people home to their families in the same condition they arrived to work in.

It was an honor to receive a Foundation scholarship. This award helped financially with the costs associated with my education. More importantly, it has furthered my professional career and serves as special recognition that distinguishes my early efforts in the safety and health field.

Patricia A. Gaudet
University of New Hampshire

After receiving an ASSE Foundation scholarship, I pursued a B.S. in ES&H from the University of Southern Maine. I am currently the occupational health & safety coordinator for the University of New Hampshire, where I have been working on ergonomic assessments designed to prevent workplace injuries within a library setting.

After suffering a work-related crush injury that prevented my return to work as a journeyman instrumentation technician at a paper mill in Maine, I chose another field of study. A career in SH&E was an obvious choice. I feel challenged everyday in this career and it has become my passion.

The ASSE Foundation scholarship allowed me to work part-time in an area of safety while attending college full-time. Without the award, it would have taken me at least two more years to finish school and move into a safety position.

Advocate Fall 2003
Kraemer Joins Foundation Board of Trustees

David Kraemer, Ph.D., was recently named to ASSEF’s Board of Trustees. Kraemer is chair of the Dept. of Occupational Safety and Health at Murray State (KY) University, where he is also the director of the Occupational Safety and Health Training Center. In addition, he serves as project director of NIOSH’s training project grant. Currently a member of ASSE’s Council on Professional Development and a member of the Society’s Purchase Area Chapter, Kraemer was the 1995-96 recipient of the Louisville Chapter’s Distinguished Service Award. He has served as a NIOSH site visit evaluator since 1993, and as an ASAC/ABET program evaluator for ASSE and ABET since 1997.

Kraemer earned a Ph.D. in Health Education/Occupational Safety and Health, in addition to M.S. and B.S. degrees, from Southern Illinois University (SIU) in Carbondale. He previously served as staff assistant for the SIU Safety Center, and as assistant professor in the occupational safety master’s/undergraduate program at the University of Wisconsin-Stout. Kraemer has spoken internationally on safety and health topics at the Ministry of Labor of the Peoples Republic of China and has consulted at the Technological Institute of Costa Rica as part of an Academic Specialist Program.

A recipient of the American Academy of Safety Education’s Fellow Award, Kraemer is a member and the current president-elect of the Academy. He is also a member of the Academic Advisory Committee for the Semiconductor Environmental Safety and Health Assn. and a member of the National Safety Council Press Editorial Advisory Board. Kraemer is a member of the Board of Directors for the Kentucky Safety and Health Network.
